The New Yorker
April 10, 1954

stories of John Cheever "John Cheever is an enchanted realist, and his voice, in his luminous short stories and in incomparable novels like Bullet Park and Follower, is as rich and distinctive as any of the leading voices of postwar American literature." -Philip Roth

Climax Of "The Five-Forty-Eight"

